بِسْمِ اللَّهِ الرَّحْمَنِ الرَّحِيمِ

Questioner: A man that Allaah has put to trial through his aged father who does not abstain from sinning, like listening to singing, looking at women dancers and disparaging some of the Companions, and when he advises him he doesn't listen, so is he sinful if he angers him when he does that which contradicts the legislation?

Shaykh al-Albaanee (رَحْمَةُ اللَّهِ)¹: It is not allowed for the son to anger his parents. Rather it is only for him to advise them both, acting in accordance with the obligation of advising from one angle and due to His Saying, “And your Lord has decreed that you not worship except Him, and to parents, good treatment,”² from another.
